

Kula Hospital Auxiliary presents
A Book Signing by Dr. Patricia A. Brown

Dr. Patricia A. Brown is an educator, psychologist, and researcher. She was the Internship Director of School Counseling, Counseling Psychology graduate studies program at Chaminade University. She is president of the Filipino American Historical Society of Hawaii, a board member of the Asian American Network for Cancer Awareness, Research and Training, and a past president of the Filipino Association of University Women. She is active in promoting awareness of youth, women's and educational issues.

Like Pu'ukoli'i plantation camp where I grew up, Kula San on the slopes of Haleakala is a part of our collective memories. Dr. Patricia Brown transports readers from a magical location of green fields and fresh air to the heroic battles waged by doctors, nurses, administrators, philanthropists, federal and territorial government to provide health care to plantation era communities.

—Milton Murayama, author of All I Asking for is My Body and Five Years on a Rock

Dr. Brown has unearthed a story that reveals there were also Filipinos who wore medical whites in sanatorium wards rather than work clothes tilling Maui's soil. Such a story is not only about Maui, Hawaii's multi-ethnic immigrants, or Filipino Americans, but more significantly, about United States history and culture.

—Dr. Fred Cordova, co-founder of the Filipino American National Historical Society and author of Filipinos: Forgotten Asian Americans.

Dr. Brown pays tribute to Kula San's continuing legacy of health care in Hawai'i. Her keen research and personal insights bring to light that Kula San was once decades ahead of its time in fostering prevention-based care and wellness, long before that term had even been coined.

—Jack Lewin, M.D., former Kula Hospital Medical Director and Chief of Medical Staff and director of the Hawai'i State Department of Health.

Within these pages are Kula San's colorful patients, residents, dedicated workers, and Maui's business and community leaders. This enjoyable and impressive book is an educational journey to a prominent Maui landmark.

—Shirley Koga Takahashi, RN, BSN, CNA, NHA, former Kula Hospital Administrator
